

Bienvenue chez nous ...

On arrival at Millet, you wind down a little lane to be greeted by the sight of a centuries old large pond* that is home to an abundance of unusual protected wildlife, including special and rare species of terrapin "cistudes", heron, mink and cormorants. A little further on, the branches of two hundred year old cedars and oaks welcome the visitor with majesty to Millet.

part of the European Natura 2000 programme*

Devoted to the culture of the vine, life at this 18th Century property was always ruled by the ringing of the bell, calling everyone in the vines to come and eat.

Today, as it was then, life at Millet continues to work in rhythm with the vines.

It is in this environment, where tradition and nature are preserved, that we invite you to share with us our passion for the vine and our profession as winemakers.
